This seminar will look at the relevant theory which underpins the interventions offered to those convicted of internet sexual offences.

It will look at some areas of behaviour that contribute to abusive sexual offending including the role of trauma, loss, emotional dissonance and poor early attachments. To look at what needs internet offending plays in the defendants lives.

The session will examine what the community programme can offer and why this is a preferable option to the imposition of a short prison sentence given there is currently no prison based treatment programme intervention for internet offenders.

Course presenters are: Sue Tribe who has worked with sexual offenders since 1988 and has been involved in running accredited Prison & Probation treatment programmes and Judy Green who has worked in the Probation Service for over 35 years as a Probation Officer, working with high risk and dangerous offenders.
